market commentary

US equities rallied in the second quarter and posted strong gains following weak performance in the previous quarter. Stock prices advanced on the back of rising crude oil prices and robust corporate earnings. However, gains were partially offset by growing trade disputes between the US and its major trade partners. As widely expected, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) raised the interest rate range to 1.75–2.00% in June, and indicated that it may quicken the pace of interest rate hikes this year. All major US banks cleared the Fed's annual stress tests, restoring confidence in the health of the banking sector. Performance during the quarter continued to indicate a bias towards growth stocks, which outperformed their value peers by a wide margin. In terms of market capitalisation, large-cap companies outperformed their mid-cap peers.

Very Low Low Low/Medium Medium Medium/High High Very High

All investments carry a level of risk. You need to decide how much of each type of risk you're prepared to take. The table below gives an overview of some of the risks associated with this fund.

risk type	description of risk	level of risk for this fund
Capital Risk	This is the risk that the value of your investments will fall. The younger you are, the less worried you might be about capital risk, because your investments have time to recover their value before your retire.	High
Inflation Risk	This is the risk that the value of your investments will grow more slowly than prices rise. Inflation can be a problem for pension savings invested in cash funds particularly if the interest you're earning is less than the rate of inflation.	Med
Pension Conversion Risk	The price of an annuity changes on a regular basis. This means that the amount of income you can secure with the same amount of money will change. Pension conversion risk is the risk that the amount of income you can buy drops before you retire, because your money is invested differently to annuity funds. That's why putting more of your DC pension pot into bonds to try to match annuity prices as you get closer to retirement age can help protect against this risk.	High
